Prayer for Sunday

Lord our God,
as you have given us the night for rest
and created the day for your glory, let the remembrance of your goodness be always on our minds and the gift of your love forever in our hearts.
Keep us free from sin,
protect us in the hour of temptation
and guide us with the light of your presence;
through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Sentence of Scripture

Surely God is my help;
the Lord is the one who sustains me.
Ps 54 v 4

Collect Prayer for the Day

Before we read we pray

Lord God, defend your church from all false teaching and give to your people knowledge of your truth, that we may enjoy eternal life in Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

First Bible Reading - Wisdom of Solomon

1 v 16 – 2 v 1, 12 – 22

A contemporary translation

By their words and deeds the godless call for death; considering death a friend, they yearn for him, and make a covenant with him, worthy as they are to belong to his world. For they wrongly reasoned to themselves saying, "Our life is short, dreary and sorrowful, and there is no remedy when our end comes, no one has been known to come back from Hades. Let us lie in wait for the upright, because they are an inconvenience to us, they oppose our actions, and influence in the opposite direction to us; they reproach us for sins against the law, and accuse us of sins against our heritage and upbringing. They profess to have knowledge of God, and call themselves children of the Lord. They became to us a reproof of our way of thinking; the very sight of them weighs our spirits down because their manner of life is unlike that of others, and their ways are different to ours and seem strange. We are considered by them as something base and counterfeit, and they avoid our ways as they would filth and they see us as unclean; they call the final end of the righteous happy and blessed, and boast that God is their father. Let us see if their words are true, and let us test what will happen at the end of their life; for if the righteous person is God's son, God will help them, and will deliver them from the clutches of their enemies. Let us test them with cruelty, insult and torture so that we may find out how gentle and patient they really are. Let us condemn them to a shameful death, for, according to what they say, they will be protected." This is the way the godless reason, but they were led astray because their wickedness blinded them, and they did not know the secret purposes of God, nor hope for the reward of holiness, nor recognise the reward for blameless souls. (This is the word of the Lord — Thanks be to God)

Second Bible Reading - James Chapter 3:13-4:3,7-8a

Who is wise and understanding among you? Let him show it by his good life, by deeds done in the humility that comes from wisdom. But if you harbour bitter envy and selfish ambition in your hearts, do not boast about it or deny the truth. Such "wisdom" does not come down from heaven but is earthly, unspiritual, of the devil. For where you have envy and selfish ambition, there you find disorder and every evil practice. But the wisdom that comes from heaven is first of all pure; then peace-loving, considerate, submissive, full of mercy and good fruit, impartial and sincere. Peacemakers who sow in peace raise a harvest of righteousness. What causes fights and quarrels among you? Don't they come from your desires that battle within you? You want something but don't get it. You kill and covet, but you cannot have what you want. You quarrel and fight. You do not have, because you do not ask God. When you ask, you do not receive, because you ask with wrong motives, that you may spend what you get on your pleasures. Submit yourselves, then, to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Come near to God and he will come near to you. (This is the word of the Lord – Thanks be to God)

He took a little child and had him stand among them.

Gospel Reading - Mark 9 Verses 30-37

*Please stand and when the Gospel is announced we say - Glory to Christ our Saviour

Jesus and His disciples left that place and passed through Galilee. Jesus did not want anyone to know where they were, because he was teaching his disciples. He said to them, "The Son of Man is going to be betrayed into the hands of men. They will kill him, and after three days he will rise." But they did not understand what he meant and were afraid to ask him about it. They came to Capernaum. When he was in the house, he asked them, "What were you arguing about on the road?" But they kept quiet because on the way they had argued about who was the greatest. Sitting down, Jesus called the Twelve and said, "If anyone wants to be first, he must be the very last, and the servant of all." He took a little child and had him stand among them. Taking him in his arms, he said to them, 'Whoever welcomes one of these little children in my name welcomes me; and whoever welcomes me does not welcome me but the one who sent me.'

(This is the Gospel of Christ - Praise to Christ our Lord)

Post Communion Prayer

Keep, O Lord, your church, with your perpetual mercy; and, because without you our human frailty cannot but fall, keep us ever by your help from all things hurtful, and lead us to all things profitable to our salvation; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Hymns for Sunday

(Please distribute Holy Communion booklet and hymn sheet where requested)

1. Dear Lord and Father of mankind
2. God of grace and God of glory
3. Make me a channel of your peace (Tune St Francis)
4. Lord enthroned in heavenly splendour (Tune St Helen)

Commentary

It's not difficult to imagine the disciples are beginning to flex their elbows in the gospel reading today. Jesus tells the disciples that He will be delivered into the hands of men who will put Him to death. And, whilst the next verse tells us that the disciples did not understand what this meant, perhaps referring to the fact that Jesus tells them that after He is killed He will rise again, they then seem to be discussing who among them is the greatest. It's logical to assume that in some shape or form they were trying to decide who should take over from Jesus when He goes. If this is the case, then rather than focusing on the mission and ministry which Jesus has started, and to which we are all called to continue, they seem to be locked in discussion about who might have the best leadership characteristics to pick up the mantle of Jesus. Who has the most influential way of speaking, who might have the most persuasive voice with the Romans and the Jewish authorities? Who could engage the most with the crowds and who could equally engage with the rich, famous and influential? Whose voice and face will resonate with the public as they look to challenge some of the established thinking and understanding? Were the disciples who had witnessed the Transfiguration (which has just happened) better than the rest? It looks like some serious succession planning may have been happening on the road! Even if Jesus did come back in some shape or form as a King, He'd need an able Chief of Staff or Head Ambassador to keep things on track.

There could be challenging times and their decision about a succession plan and who should be in charge of operations could be important – they need to get it right. Yet when challenged by Jesus the childishness, futility and misguidedness of their arguments must have seemed embarrassingly obvious. Jesus points out greatness and leadership is not about popularity, about any great ability to influence others with smart words and arguments, about being the most acceptable or popular in the world's eyes or about credibility with the masses and the public. Quite the opposite. It's certainly not about selfish ambition but about servant hearted humility and offering God's welcome to all who come to them, however unimportant and 'invisible' to those that are in power. In fact, anyone who showed these characteristics, even in the faintest of ways, could become His ambassador. The humbler, more vulnerable and insignificant the person, the better. So much so that even a child can become an official representative for Jesus. And we are to welcome them. Welcome those it would seem who can be invisible in our lives, those people we never give a second glance too because they seem insignificant or unimportant. In Jesus' words there is a real challenge. How do we respond to the refugee crisis we see all around us, how do we act towards the homeless and those much less fortunate than ourselves? There as there is challenge there is also comfort. No longer do we need to struggle to be someone of importance or significance. We don't need to be the greatest. We don't need to prove we are interesting or have a position of status. We are free to be ourselves, loved by God through Jesus. We are truly chosen and free. Richard Rohr in his book, Falling Upwards talks about the two halves of life. In his model the first half of life is about building a container for ourselves and our lives, working to find and build our identity and status, working to build a home and friends, it's all about surviving successfully. It's what we focus our time and effort on as we grow up. The second half of our lives is about discovering the contents of the container. We're still quite good at maintaining the container all our lives but the real discovery is when we find the contents, the purpose for which the container was built in the first place. And ultimately it's the contents that give our life purpose and give it real security. We do need a container which is strong enough to hold real life, with all its ambiguities and conflicts, moments of deep sadness and great joy, but we also need to let go of the dependence on the things which give us outward security and comfort so that we can come to Christ as a child and be free to receive from Him the abundance of His riches, security and peace. The Father welcomes us as we are, and invites us to do the same for others irrespective of their status, importance or circumstances. Sam Cappleman

Meditation

The letter of James is often attributed to 'James, the brother or the Lord'. It's written in Greek but is more Semitic in its style of argument and was clearly intended for Jewish converts who would be very familiar with the Hebrew scriptures of the Old Testament. And, for a letter which seems to focus on moral expectations and practical good works, its underpinnings can be found in much of the philosophical Jewish Wisdom tradition and teaching. These too are surprisingly practical in their application. Some writers refer to the book of James as the New Testament's chief wisdom book so we do well to study and understand its teachings and apply them in our own lives. As we see James' setting in a wisdom context it's then understandable when we read that the opening verse of today's passage encourages its readers to put into practical action the things that (their) wisdom prompts them to do. The book of Proverbs 1 v 7 tells us that the fear of the Lord, that is our awe and reverence, are the beginning of wisdom. James therefore challenges us to think about and take action on some of the practical things of life as we come before God with our own awe and reverence. Challenges to reflect and take action on issues and topics such as the news of the refugee crisis, or as we see what is happening in our increasingly fragmented society, or as we are inundated with images of inequality and as we look out on a world of indifference to suffering and hear of everyday needs in those around us. Perhaps we need to ask ourselves whether our lack of action is sometimes because of our lack of that awe and reverence for God and a dulling of our sense of the need to do what is right in the light of situations and circumstances where Jesus Himself would have acted with love, care and compassion. As James points out, wisdom is more than reading about, seeing or even understanding a particular situation, it's about taking practical action in the light of the insight a relationship with God through Jesus gives each one of us. Being open to the prompts which He sometimes gives us, rather than ignoring them because it is more convenient or expedient for us to do so.

Prayers for Sunday and the week ahead

God whose holy name defies our definition, but whose will is known in freeing the oppressed, make us to be one with all who cry for justice; that we who speak your praise may struggle for your truth, through Jesus Christ. Amen. All desires known

You brought me up, O Lord, from the dead. Lord, you hide your face when we trust in ourselves; strip us of false security and re-clothe us in your praise, that we may know you as the one who raises us from death, as you raised your Son, our Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen Daily Prayer, Refrain from Psalm 30

Loving God, who chose to send your Son into our world, be with us today as we make our daily choices. Help us keep our eyes fixed on you, that in your eyes we may be wise, that we may grow in wisdom and reflect the glory of your incarnation, Jesus Christ who is with us always in the power of your Spirit. Amen

Risen Christ, whose absence leaves us paralysed, but whose presence is overwhelming, breathe on us with your abundant life; that where we cannot see we may have courage to believe that we may be raised with you. Amen

Now may the blessing of God the Father, who made from one every nation that occupies the earth; of God the Son, who bought us for God from every tribe and language and people and nation; and God the Holy Spirit, who brings us together in unity, be with you and remain with you always. Amen

CHURCH LEGACY

A lasting gift to your church

Christian Legacy Week October 2015

Once you have made provision for your loved ones, you have the opportunity to make a lasting gift by leaving a legacy to God's church. Leaving a gift in your will to your local church is one of the most valuable and lasting ways you can continue to support the mission and ministry in your community. A gift can be an expression of your gratitude and thanksgiving towards God, and can help keep your local church alive, and help transform its future. Please speak to Church Treasurers Ian Farthing or John Hitt if you would like to know more. We can also provide a solicitor to help prepare your will and cover the cost if this is difficult for you.

Sam's Book Review

Falling Upward: Richard Rohr
£9.99 Kindle

List Price around £10.99 Hardback,

Richard Rohr's book 'Falling Upward' is subtitled 'A spirituality for the two halves of life'. At its centre is the concept of a life of two halves, the first half where we are focused on establishing our identities by what we do and what we achieve, and the second half where we are compelled by what happens to us in life, the things we can't necessarily control, to take a wider perspective which takes us out of our comfort zones. The first half is about constructing the container of our lives, the second about what is in the container. Rohr explores how our very failings and mistakes, the loss of control and challenges that can happen in the first half of our life can be the foundation for our spiritual growth, a beginning to falling upwards. 'In the divine economy of grace, sin and failure become the base metal and raw material for the redemption experience itself.' The heartbreaks of life and disappointments of the first half of life can therefore be the stepping stones to the spiritual joy that lies in store for us as we enter the second half of life, whatever age that might be.
